For the Andover Townsman.

BOTH SIDES.

BY NANCY JANE.

A man in his carriage was riding along,
A gayly dressed wife by his side,
In satin and laces she looked like the queen,
And he like a king in his pride.

A wood sawyer stood on the street as they passed,
The carriage and couple he eyed,
And said as he worked with his saw on a log,
"I wish I was rich and could ride."

The man in the carriage remarked to his wife,
"One thing I would give if I could;
I'd give my wealth for the strength and the health
Of the man who sawed the wood."

A pretty young maid with a bundle of work,
Whose face as the morning was fair,
Went tripping along with a song of delight,
While humming a love-breathing air.

She looked on the carriage, the lady she saw,
Arrayed in apparel so fine,
And said in a whisper, "I wish from my heart
That those satins and laces were mine."

The lady looked out on the maid with her work,
So far in her calico dress,
And said, "I'd relinquish position and wealth
Her beauty and youth to possess.

Thus it is in the world, whatever our lot,
Our minds and our time we employ
In longing and sighing for what we have not,
Ungrateful for what we enjoy.

The First Time I Spoke.

Rev. E. E. Hale says in his paper "A New England Boyhood," in the August Atlantic, of the teaching of elocution in earlier days:

"I remember perfectly the first time I spoke. It must have been in September, 1831. At my mother's instigation, I spoke a little poem by Tom Moore, long since forgotten by everybody else, which I had learned and spoken at the other school. It is a sort of ode, in which Moore abuses some poor Neapolitan wretches because they had made nothing of a rebellion against the Austrians. As Tom Moore was himself an Irish patriot who had never exposed a finger-nail to be hurt for the Irish cause, I have since thought that his passion was all blatherskite. However that may be, I stepped on the stage, frightened, but willing to do as I had been told, made my bow, and began.

"Ay, down to the dust with them, slaves, as they are!"

I had been told that I must stamp my foot at the words "down to the dust with them," and I did, though I hated to, and was sore afraid. Naturally enough, all the other boys, one hundred and fifty of them, laughed at such an exhibition of passion from one of the smallest of the number. All the same, I plodded on; but alas, I came inevitably to the other line,

"If there linger one spark of their fire, tread it out!"

and here I had to stamp again, as much to the boys' amusement as before. I did not get a "good mark" for speaking then, and I never did afterwards. But the exercise did what it was meant to do; that is, it taught us not to be afraid of the audience. And this, so far as I know, is all of elocution that can be taught, or need be tried for. In college, it was often very droll when the time came for one of the Southern braggarts to speak at an exhibition. For we saw then the same young man who had always blown his own trumpet loudly, and been cock of the walk in his own estimation,—we saw him with his knees shaking under him on the college platform, because he had to speak in the presence of two hundred people. I owe to the public school and to this now despised exercise of declamation that ease before an audience which I share with most New Englanders. This is to say that I owe to it the great pleasure of public speaking when there is anything to say. I think most public men will agree with me that this is one of the most exquisite pleasures of life."

Picnic Lunches.

Meats for sandwiches should be boiled the day before; then after removing bone, skin, and gristle they should be put in packing tins, heavily weighted, and set in a cool place over night, writes Mrs. A. G. Lewis in the July Ladies' Home Journal. Cut in very thin slices.

Bread one day old is the best, and a very sharp knife is needed for cutting it into thin slices not over three inches square. These buttered slightly, may be daintily filled with ham, salad, sardines, tongue, or whatever one likes.

Then cut confectioner's paper just large enough to cover the sandwiches neatly. Place them side by side, closely packed, and they will preserve their shape without breaking. The paper is not to be removed until served.

Cakes must also be one day old, and for picnic use a little extra flour in stirring, and an extra five or ten minutes in baking will ensure a firmer crust. Frosting, if put on hot, does not crackle and fall off. Cookies are more desirable than loaf cake, as are also cup and gem cakes. Jelly and cream confections are seldom nice for picnic serving.

Pies made of jellies, fruit, or sweets are best cooked in turnover fashion, the pastry covering the filling entirely. Lay them in paper covers, and they serve thus very conveniently.

Lemon, orange, strawberry, raspberry or currant juices should be extracted then sweetened, and when well dissolved, bottled. Drinks can then be prepared by adding two tablespoonfuls to a tumbler of ice water. All these juices combined make a delicious drink.

Strong coffee or tea may also be prepared and served in the same way. Bright tin tumblers are more convenient than tumblers, and there is no danger of breakage.

Hampers with several trays are more desirable for packing. Ordinary lunch baskets are a difficulty. White confectioner's paper should be used for lining the baskets and for separating the different kinds of food; also for covering neatly individual pieces. Cookies and crackers must be put in tight boxes. Plates are too heavy, but bright new biscuit tins—the square shapes are the best—are very useful in packing, and with fringed napkins laid inside they serve well for salvers in handing the food around. Paper napkins are best.

Whatever is to be eaten last should be packed at the bottom of the hamper and that to be served first at the top. Fruit, pickles, olives, and cheese must not be forgotten.

Giggle—Gabble—Gobble.

A recent bon-mot of Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes is well worth reading. He had been serving as the lion at a social occasion one afternoon, and after the event was over and all had departed but himself, his hostess met him with an effusive and winning smile, and said, "Well, Doctor, what do you think of an afternoon tea?"

"I think," said the great Autocrat of the Breakfast Table, "that it is giggle,—gabble,—gobble,— and git."

Horseshoes without Nails.

The tests that have been made by a street car company of Paris of a new form of nailless horseshoes have been so successful that the company has decided to employ this shoe exclusively in the future. The new shoe is made of Bessemer steel, and in appearance is similar to the ordinary shoe, except that it has a bent lever that attaches itself half-way up the rear of the hoof without in any way compressing it.

A clamp incloses the hoof, parting the two heels of the shoe, and is supported on the top of the lever, which wholly sustains it, and thereby prevents compression of any part of the hoof. The shoe is also fitted with three small interior clamps, which penetrate the horn of the hoof and prevent displacement of the shoe without the preliminary raising of the clamp. A number of private firms in Paris have also tested the shoe with success. It is considered by many that this form of shoe will sooner or later revolutionize the farrier's industry.--Philadelphia Record.

A DUTCH WEDDING IN IOWA.

How the Fantastic Bridegroom Delivers the Invitations.

"Hochzeit! Hochzeit!" was the strange and unmusical cry which reached the ears of all listeners as an odd looking personage on an equally odd looking horse dashed down the one street of a small Iowa town. To all unconcerned this incident would have ended there had not a woman's curiosity been aroused. The rider wore a white felt hat, and from its broad brim flowed ribbons of many colors and various lengths, though none exceeded two yards or were less than one.

Over his coat, which, seen in its semivisible condition, looked like buckskin, were pinned handkerchiefs of all sizes, qualities and colors, from the daintiest of white lace to the most flashing of silk mufflers. Mingled with these were neckties of every description, though all of a feminine character. This rider, although a sturdy Dutchman, had not sufficient area on which to display the finery he had gathered, so it was pinned, tied, twisted and festooned on the beast he rode. Even the horse's tail was kept from contact with the miry road by broad bands of red and blue ribbon, but its legs showed signs of a long and muddy journey.

This odd bundle of nature, art and merchandise proved to be a wedding invitation. He stopped at the homes of the favored ones and sang some thing not quite so short as his previous song, "Hochzeit," but quite as musical; whereupon the head of the family thus invited replied in song with a verse probably as old and set by custom as the first had been. He then added another bit of brilliancy to the already well plumaged rider; but should the invitation have found him unprepared with a suitable dainty offering to the bride elect he would have given a piece of money, which seldom exceeds a quarter of a dollar. With this the rider, who, by the way, is the one interested next to the bride at the coming "Hochzeit," buys some trinket and pins it upon himself.

These invitations are always delivered two weeks before the wedding, and on the happy day the bride endeavors to wear as much of the finery her lord to be has gathered as possible. But these trinkets don't take the place of wedding presents. The latter are in most cases substantial, useful and costly. The wedding or "Hochzeit" generally begins Friday and lasts three days.—Chicago Tribune.

Stranger (at big hotel)—I notice you fee the waiters. Do you get better service?

Regular Guest—No.

Stranger—Then why do you do it?

Regular Guest—So they won't spill the soup down my back.—New York Weekly.

The throne of an Egyptian queen who flourished 1,600 years B. C. is still in existence, and is supposed to be the oldest chair in the world. It is of ebony, so hardened by age as to appear as if carved from black marble.

To prevent rapid loss of heat, underclothing of wool should always be worn. Wool is the best material that can be used to prevent rapid evaporation, and at the same time allow the air to ventilate the skin.

FRIDAY, JULY 29, 1892.

The excellent job in front of the Town House only serves to show the advantage of having levels made properly, and the grade placed to those levels. Engineer Smith of the waterworks laid out the work, and Supt. Lovejoy kept to his lines faithfully; the result is complimentary to both. By the way, if the paving on the outside of the railway track was "all right" why was it changed in order to make this job right?

If the police authorities are unable to keep bathers out of Haggetts Pond, some other means should be adopted. At the picnic in Dixon's grove on Thursday, nearly 100 bathers were in the pond and would not be warned off. Either sufficient force should be sent there to stop it, or the grove license revoked.

Some of our Andover ladies will be glad to know of the recent orders to the street car conductors, designed to make them pay more attention to their duties, and less attention to silly talk and conduct with any girls on the cars who may be willing to receive their flattery and small talk. Now let the order be enforced.

Lawn Party.

The lawn party under the auspices of the Y. P. S. C. E. of the West Church, last night, was a very pleasant and pretty affair. It was well attended, but the cloudy skies doubtless deterred many from venturing to an out-door party. The grassy plot near the church presented a handsome appearance, chinese lanterns being hung in different places, and tables befng set for the serving of ice cream, lemonade, cake, fruit, etc. About 8.30 the Andover Band arrived, and pleased the company with several well-rendered selections. After this concert there was a short but very pleasing entertainment given on a platform just outside the vestry. The programme consisted of excellent readings by Mrs. Charles Hardy and Miss Ethel Southwick of Lawrence, and songs by Mrs. Jacobs of Malden, a summer visitor, which were especially entertaining and finely rendered.

Abbot Academy.

The trustees of Abbot Academy have made a good beginning with the renovations in Smith Hall. They have wisely decided to continue in the third story hall the maroon papering of the second story. Some twenty-five rooms are in process of being repainted and furnished. To judge from the samples on the walls, the effect of the papers will be extremely pretty and homelike. Mr. E. J. Rowe, whose work in Chicago and Florida is well known, has grappled with a difficult job in a way to commend his French taste to the French department. We understand that the new pupils have already bespoken the new accommodations almost to the full limit.

The trustees have also concluded to finish the eighteen rooms in the third story of Draper Hall, which have only been awaiting the influx of scholars requisite to fill them. We understand the architect will be be Mr. Warren Floyd of Lowell.

It is pleasant to learn that Miss Watson, the new principal of Abbot, has returned to Draper Hall for a week.

Boynton Family Reunion.

All Boyntons, Boyingtons, and Byingtons are cordially invited to attend the tenth annual reunion of the Boynton family, to be held August 10, 1899, at Wesleyan Hall 36 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass. Several prominent members of the family are expected to be in attendance, and from the present indications there will be a large and enthusiastic gathering.

An attractive musical and literary program has been arranged, and a collation will be served in the hall from 12 M. till 1 P.M., at fifty cents per plate. Those who wish to participate should notify J. W. Titus, Room 53, 10 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

Andover House Association.

A circular containing the report of the work of the Andover House Association at the end of the first official year has been received, and it is interesting reading. The membership has grown from one to three hundred since its beginning. Other bits of information regarding the work and success of this organization which emanates from our own town, taken from this report, will without doubt be interesting to many of our readers.

The first object of the Association in undertaking its work was to establish a house where men could, as actual residents, share the life of a thickly populated part of Boston, both for the sake of learning the conditions of existence there, and of developing means for their improvement. A better knowledge of how the people live is, it was felt, an absolute requisite to any effort to assist the people in solving the difficulties that surround them.

A further object was to arouse among its own members a deeper interest in the social problems of their own immediate neighborhoods and of the community at large. It is intended that one important use of the House through its outfit and its staff shall be that of serving as a centre for information and skilled assistance in matters of investigation or of practical experiment which members of the Association might take in hand in connection with their own work.

As the residents of the House were expected to go in and out as neighbors, the House was made to be as nearly as possible like a home. Every one who comes to the House, comes in as every one else does. Every one is a guest. This has kept the work done in the House within rather narrow limits, especially as it needs time for getting acquainted in such a way with the adult members of a neighborhood.

The boys' clubs have formed the main feature of the work done within the House. At first a list of more than one hundred boys and youth, of ages ranging from ten to eighteen, was made out, and five groups were asked to come in, each on its regular evening, once a week. To begin with, some of the groups contained as many as twenty-five boys; but it was soon found that the meetings were much more successful with a still smaller number, especially as the boys were received in the parlors. Each group, except the one made of the older boys, has been under the regular charge of two persons who have really tried to make friends of the boys

As a rule in the clubs, each evening began with games in the rear room. Then those who wished to read went into the front room where books and papers are kept. Nearly every evening some one has read to the boys, or talked to them about a matter of interest. Usually the evening ended with the singing of college songs.

The girls' club (the G.R C.—the meaning of the letters being something to be acted out rather than told of), conducted by Mrs. William B. Kehew, has met regularly on Wednesday afternoons. It has twenty-five members, all of whom show a great interest in the club. The girls have spent the first part of the time in sewing, with more or less conversation, of course, over their needles; the last part of the time has been taken up with various amusements. Through the summer the club will meet two mornings in the week, under the direction of Mrs. Rutan, to arrange and distribute flowers among the sick and aged of the neighborhood, under the plan pursued by the association called the Mutual Helpers.

The work of the clubs has been supplemented by the loaning of books from the library to club members; by the Stamp Savings Bank; and by more or less visiting among the families of the members. A joint entertainment for the boys' and girls' clubs was held in June, at which Lieut. Wadhams, U.S.N., gave a vivid account of some of his naval experiences.

During several Sunday afternoons in the spring an exercise was held which we called the "Music Hour." Each day a group of the pupils of the New England Conservatory, in charge of Professor E. D. Hale, came to assist.

Other uses of the House have been: for two neighborhood receptions; for some preliminary sessions of a mothers' meeting, which we hope may begin again in the autumn; and for the lectures by members of the Association. Deposits for the savings bank have been received every week-day evening. The library, consisting of about two hundred books for young people, is now arranged and catalogued.

The work without the House in the district has consisted of getting acquainted with the streets, learning their character, finding out about the way the law is administered, and in seeing in general how life is lived.

A group of young men—clerks and mechanics, graduates of the evening High School—who have formerly met at the Trinity House, will, for the future, hold their weekly meeting at our House. Some of the residents will join them in their meetings, which are given up to study and discussion of political and historical questions.

A feature of the work which will prove more and more valuable has been the getting acquainted with the public charitable and corrective institutions, and with private organizations for doing philanthropic work. The recognition of the Andover House from all who are engaged in such ways has been most cordial.

The residents of the house from the beginning have been Mr. Woods, Mr. Chandler, Mr. Bevington, and Mr. Morris. Mr. Morris has recently left us, and Mr. Chandler is soon to leave. Two new men are to come from Andover from the last class; and we hope that by the autumn we shall have the full quota of six men in the House.

On the whole, we can at the end of six months merely say that certain things have been attempted and begun. Many things remain still untried. Of the attempts that have been made, some have for the present failed; some seem to be full of promise already. In any case our friends may be stronger than ever in the assurance that there is a large opportunity for such an effort as the Andover House stands for. As yet, however, the residents can hardly venture to seek for approval; they merely ask the patient sympathy of the friends and supporters of the House.

A Work of Art.

The new banner picture given away with "Purifine" soap powder is a real work of art and one that every lady in Andover will want in her home. It is offered by the Beach Soap Co. for 10 coupons, one of which will be found in each package of Purifine.

TURN ON THE HOSE!

HAGGETTS POND WATER HELPS MAKE ANDOVER A LITTLE COOLER.

That Andover's citizens have universally enjoyed the blessings of Haggett's Pond water the past few days, a glance at the water works record of consumption will most emphatically prove.

And another almost equally as positive proof might be more easily found by walking along almost any street in the Centre, between the hours of 5 and 8 in the afternoon, and noting the dozens and even hundreds of hose keeping alive the lawns, and the same time rendering the air a trifle cooler; in fact,

PLAYING THE HOSE

seems to be the favorite pastime among our people from the staid professor to the bright Miss in white, all ages and all classes think they get cooler by an hours play with the cool Haggetts water.

How the pond is standing this drain, etc., may be of interest, and a pleasant visit to Supt. Smith answers the querys with the following interesting facts:

The lowest average consumption comes in the winter months, at which time the daily average is about 190,000 gallons, but this is at the present time almost doubled, the actual daily average being overy 375,000 gallons per day, or taking our population at 6250 persons, an average per day of

SIXTY GALLONS FOR EACH MAN, WOMAN, AND CHILD IN ANDOVER.

What did you do with your sixty gallons yesterday?

The pond is now 14 inches below high water mark which is the same lovel it touched at its lowest point last year.

The pumps are run every other day, and the reservoir is seldom less than two-thirds full, its capacity being equal to about three days supply at the present large consumption.

LOTS OF WATER

is being used but there is an abundance still in the pond, and as long as the pumps work, Andover will be a long way off from a water famine, but for all this there should be no waste and a glance at the regulations for users might not be amiss. Especially to that clause in regard to sprinkling, that allows only two hours a day for use of hose, unless metre rates are paid. My friend,

BE HONEST WITH YOUR SILL COCK!

so that the Andover waterworks may pay in the dollars score as they do from the standpoint of convenience and pleasure.

EXTENSIONS.

The various extensions on the waterworks are being pushed along as fast as possible, the work having been awarded to Contractor Goodhue.

On Porter Street, the extension has been made to the new house building by I. A. Eastman.

The Elm Street line will be run as far as M. C. Andrews' barn, and next in order will come the line along Union Street in Frye Village, to the Lawrence line.

The two dead ends on Washington Avenue will be connected, and about 750 feet will be laid in the road leading by George Buchan's, in West Parish.

Weather Notes.

There will be one chance for a short storm between the 28th and 31st. If that combination goes around us we shall have to depend on cold waves for a change. A small low-down aurora on the 25th, late at night,—if it is followed up as such phenomena have been since January—promises a supply of ozone at hand, anyway. But the western man who said that the localities that suffered from the slight drought in April would get it hot and heavy in July and August seems to have been a guesser so far. The summer cyclone on which we depend for supplies seems to have taken a vacation to the northward, and all the signs are for a late and dry autumn in our section.

Flirting Must be Stopped.

The management of the electric road, having received some complaint in regard to the flirting tendencies of some of the conductors, has issued the following order:

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

"Conductors are requested to read rule 7 in book of rules and regulations. There is considerable complaint in regard to conductors paying more attention to windows on Essex Street than to their business. If this thing is not stopped it will lead to the suspension of whoever may be found guilty, as it is no place for flirtation on a street car, and it must be stopped at once. N. E. MORTON, Supt."

Other orders of interest to the public are:

"In case you should be obliged to go over a hill with a car ahead of you, always wait until the car in advance reaches the bottom of the hill before you descend."

"Conductors must use all possible means to avoid accidents. Especial attention is called to the bridge at Andover, where passengers standing on the step must be notified before the car crosses the bridge.

"Motormen must never pass a car on a curve. If two cars should arrive at a curve or double track at the same time, the car going toward the post-office must wait. Any motorman known to go more than three miles per hour by cross streets will be suspended.

Conductors on Andover line must be more careful with regard to transfers. A transfer is good only to and from Andover St."

Frye Village.

J. K. Cole and family of Peabody are visiting friends here.

William T. Sellers, agricultural editor of the Lawrence Eagle and Tribune, is occupying the Frye farm.

Supt. Morton of the electric road has a gang of men at work laying the new turnout near Donald's ink factory.

The well-known dog belonging to Matthew Kelly had to be shot, as a result of having bitten Willie Smith.

Elizabeth Lawson, of Lawrence, has been visiting at James Campbell's.

Emma Poulin, of Weymouth, is visiting her grandfather, Alexander Wilson.

Annie Gilchrist, of Lawrence, is spending a short time with Miss Annie Mitchell.

Jessie, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Porter died last night of cholera infantum.

Mr. and Mrs. James Fraser spent Saturday, Sunday and Monday with his parents and other relatives at Crescent Beach.

Mrs. Jackson and son Paul of Swampscott, have been visitors at their fathers, W. C. Donald's.

Herbert K. Hill is at his father's home laid up with a case of poisoning. While at his work in Saugus, he turned his ankle and bathed it with balm of Gilead, which acted upon it like a poison.

Cricket.

The Andovers go to Longwood to-morrow afternoon to play the champion B. A. A. team. The following is the team selected to play; Capt. Bruce, Kydd, Low, Saunders, Coates, Greig, Millar, Dick, Ripley, Hetherington.

Those who attended the match last Saturday afternoon between the Merrimacs of Lawrence and the Andovers saw a fine exhibition of good cricket. The visitors had their strongest eleven and were out for the game, but the great bowling of Bruce and also of Saunders was the barrier which prevented the realization of their hopes. Carter's bowling kept the Andovers from scoring very heavily. The home team fielded excellently. The score:

A Big Success.

The big bargain sale of men's low priced suits at Bicknell Bros. has been liberally attended by crowds of people who have confidence in a bargain sale advertised by this house, and they have been highly pleased with the selection, honest value and low prices. It is safe to put the sale on record as a full-grown success, both for the house and the lucky purchasers. Although the sizes are somewhat broken, many plums are still to be had. Vacationists should read their "ad" to day.

Brownie goes Fishing.

Yes, I've been a fishing! I didn't catch much, not even a wet foot, and the other part of the saying would need to be changed to "empty" instead of the original saw. It was early in the morning when we started, very early, and you never saw anybody happier than I was. I didn't eat anything before the start but took a lemon instead so I wouldn't be seasick. We went out on a sloop (all this is what they told me) and I came in on a scoop and not a newspaper one, either.

It was delightful at first, the very first, and I was at peace with all the world. Of course I shouldn't be sick! but I did feel a bit dizzy; yes, I would lie down. Would I fish? no, I guessed not. I'd—and then I commenced; what? absolutely nothing, and they told me that was the trouble just because I commenced so hard and never finished. Reader, were you ever seasick? If you were you have certainly made your peace with this world once. How I did want to get ashore, and begged and pleaded, but all in vain. Then I tried to buy my passage back at once, but the fish were biting, and though I offered to give them my essay on road building, with a picture of a road scraper on the front and a Moody and Sankey song in the back, they wouldn't stir, and I kept on commencing. I thought of suicide, but my knife was dull; I tried to jump overboard, but I couldn't move to get near the rail. Yet I got back on shore and I'm better now, but I guess I won't go again, thank you.

But how my letter must have boomed this place; last week I didn't seen an Andoverian, this week there are lots of them, though to tell the truth they don't look the same as they do at home, some of these saunterers; and I believe that the beach is the only place where the way of the world changes, and the rich grow poorer and the poor grow richer, till a few-dollars-a-week clerk at home gets the reputation of a bank cashier when off on his two weeks vacation. I tell you, a tennis suit and a pair of light shoes have made many a millionaire for a week or two.

This is a gay place, though, and there is a pile to see, with camp meetings, dances, boating, and fishing (yes, some even like fishing), horse racing, etc., there seems to be no end to the fun a man may have, to say nothing of the profit to be obtained from a continued study of physiology. I leave here Saturday.

Yours,

BROWNIE.

Talked of Old Times.

There are not many of our readers, especially older ones, who do not know or have not heard of Simon Wardwell, who has been an old resident of this town and lived for a long time on the Prospect Hill road. It seems that Mr. Wardwell is down East visiting his birthplace, Saco. While there he was met by a reporter of the Biddeford Times, who found in him "an old gentleman remarkable in many ways." Among other things the reporter says of him:

Simon Wardwell was the oldest child of Eliakim Wardwell of Saco, consequently a brother of Mrs. Lydia Clapp to whom Saco owes so much for her beneficence in founding the Wardwell Home.

He was born in Saco July 4, 1805, and is therefore eighty-seven years of age. He passed his childhood and youth in Saco, and from his tremendous store of knowledge he must have been a very observing and intelligent youth. He is a perfect encyclopedia of local history for the period passed here by him till his departure for other spheres of adventure in 1828.

There is about him something of the feebleness of body consequent upon so great an age, but his mind is alert and cute on old matters. The fond pages of his memory's book are not in the least obscured by ancient cobwebs or dust of forgetfulness, and as for dotage it has so far found no lodgment in his mind. His powers of conversation are most excellent, and he appears to have cultivated the amenities of intercourse to a marked degree.

Mr. Wardwell was one of a crowd of boys who went to the beach with the artillery which went down to repel the British ship "Bulwarks" which came in to the Pool and destroyed the vessel of Capt. Thomas Cutts. She was expected to pay her respects to Saco Ferry, and the artillery was sent down to meet her.

Mr. Wardwell remembers plainly the visit and reception to President James Monroe, and he rode in the cavalcade that went out to escort Lafayette into and out of town. These and hundreds of other matters he remembers as though they were events of today. He can tell every building in the village, and describe them, all that were there previous to 1828. On the whole he is the most remarkable type of old age that has appeared in these parts.

The day was all that could be desired and everything contributed to the enjoyment of the party. Bathing in the surf was the most popular amusement of the day. The party returned at 7.16 very much pleased with the results of a most successful excursion.

The grading and work on the school house grounds is nearly completed. As soon as the grass is started this building and grounds will be an ornament to the village and the wisdom of the committee in selecting this site is again apparent.

NORTH ANDOVER STATION, MASS.

A WILD ANARCHIST

ATTEMPTS TO ASSASSINATE CHAIR MAN HENRY FRICK.

He Uses Pistol and Knife and Afterwar Attempts to Blow Off His Own Hea. with a Dynamite Bomb.

PITTSBURG, July 25.—Henry Clay Frick chairman of the Carnegie Steel company was shot twice and stabbed in his privat office at 1:45 o'clock Saturday afternoon by Alexander Bergman, a Russian Jew printer from New York.

Like Norcross, the fiend who failed to kill Russell Sage, and perished himself the would-be assassin of the millionaire manufacturer carried dynamite bombs They were small, but large enough to kill, and while being photographed at the Central police station the man tried to commit suicide in a horrible manner.

He was caught in the act of chewing bomb, and it was quickly taken from him. Chemists wonder how an explosion was averted.

For three days after the terrible riot of July 6 Mr. Frick was guarded by detectives, but since that time he has evidently not feared an assault. He was sitting in his private office Saturday afternoon when the colored messenger announced that a well-dressed young man desired an interview. Mr. Frick granted the request and Bergman entered. A moment later a pistol shot and sounds of a scuffle created a panic in the office and made every clerk's face whiten with fear.

Two more shots, and Mr. Frick's shouts for help brought them to their senses and they rushed to the rescue. Mr. Frick was grappling with his assailant, whose snow-white clothes were red with blood from the millionaire's wounds.

Mr. Frick Pummelled the Man

until he fainted from loss of blood. The assassin made a rush for the elevator, which had just stopped on the second floor, but there his progress was stopped by a dozen hands, and he was held until the police arrived.

There were at least 5000 people gathered in front of the Carnegie offices within five minutes after the shooting. A large number of sullen men stood around, and more than once was heard a muttered "Served him right." But the generality of the people, business men and workmen alike, despised the infernal atrocity which would conceive of a deliberate murder and execute it at all risks.

A large crowd followed the patrol wagon to the central police station, and when the lockup was reached the police were compelled to shut the gates to the yards to keep out the people.

The Criminal Riddle

in the central police station here, called indifferently "the anarchist," Alexander Bergman and Simon Roachman, is still unsolved. His antecedents are unknown. Whence he came or why he shot Mr. Frick are matters of conjecture purely. No one, even of the shrewd detectives or newspaper men who have been at work since his attempt at assassination, has got anything but contradictory or trivial information from him. He stated that after his transfer to the county jail he would make a written statement for the Associated Press, and until then he would decline to answer any questions.

He was whistling a sentimental air when a correspondent was admitted to the calaboose yesterday. He is a slight, but wiry looking youth, 22 years old, near-sighted and wearing glasses. His most peculiar feature is the mouth, which is large and sensual, and has two curious flaps of flesh within the lips, which, when his mouth is open, still partially covers his upper teeth. His chin is strong, his forehead excellently shaped and the ears stand out from the head. The only fault to be found with his appearance is the shifty, furtive manner in which he uses his eyes. He would not be a notable man in a crowd, and would be classed as a German Jew of some education.

Mr. Frick's Condition.

H. C. Frick slept well during Saturday night and rested easily during yesterday. His temperature is 99, and he seems to be quite cheerful and confident of his recovery. A curious thing was that another cut was discovered yesterday which was missed in the examination made Saturday. It is in the left leg just below the calf and has almost severed the tendons. He complained of pain in the leg, but his attendants imagined that it was of the other wounds he spoke. It was, of course, carefully dressed and relief followed. The patient passed the day listening to letters and telegrams and dictating replies. He has also gone over the papers quite closely and discussed their contents. It is the intention of his associates in the company to let Mr. Frick continue the direction of the contest at Homestead from his home, as they believe that the worry and anxiety of enforced idleness in such a crisis would do him more harm than the work itself.

Harrity is Chosen.

NEW YORK, July 23.—The meeting of the Democratic national committee was called for noon, but it was some time later when the members got together in the Fifth Avenue Hotel. When the committee was called to order, Chairman Brice made a speech. He was followed by Messrs. Gorman, Ransom, Whitney and Lieutenant Governor Sheehan.

William F. Harrity of Pennsylvania was elected chairman. Siman P. Sheerin of Indiana was re-elected secretary. Robert R. Roosevelt of New York was elected treasurer to succeed Charles J. Canda.

A Shower of Greenbacks.

LOWELL, Mass., July 23.—Walter A. Whidden of this city, who has just returned, with several companions, from a visit to the old Whidden farmhouse in Westford, reports that while there a portion of the ceiling fell, and with it came a roll of greenbacks of dates from 1862 to 1865 and aggregating $150.

LYNN'S LATEST MYSTERY.

Much Conjecture Over the Strange Disappearance of Two Citizens.

LYNN, Mass., July 27.—Clarence McLeod has disappeared from his home here under circumstances which are withheld from the public, that the work of solving the mystery may not be hindered. McLeod resides on West Neptune street. Early last Friday morning he left home, ostensibly to visit the Lynn and Boston car houses, where he was employed. That was the last seen of him, and there are facts concerning his disappearance which indicate that he has been foully dealt with.

Martin B. Harney, a young man 27 years of age, residing at 483 Boston street, has also disappeared in a singular manner. He has been absent from home since Monday morning, and his relatives fear that harm has befallen him. He wore a light suit of clothes and a straw hat.

And Still Another.

LYNN, Mass., July 28.—William Sword, an Englishman, employed in the Thompson-Houston electric works, Lynn, has been missing since July 4. He boarded on Mall street and left no word to indicate any intention of leaving Lynn. A week's salary is due him, and this, coupled with the fact that his effects are still in the city, has caused his friends to fear that he is the victim of foul play.

WRECK OF THE ALVA.

Vanderbilt's Famous Yacht Run Down by Steamer H. F. Dimock.

BOSTON, July 25.—William K. Vanderbilt's magnificent floating palace Alva was run down and sunk at the entrance to Martha's Vineyard sound yesterday morning by the steamer H. F. Dimock of the Metropolitan Steamship company.

The crew of the Alva discovered that the stem of the other vessel had penetrated the side of their steamer, and that the forward bulkheads had been stove in. Realizing the fact that but a short time would elapse before they must sink, they hailed the other vessel, which made out to be the H. F. Dimock, notifying her crew of the serious nature of the accident.

The party, in their night robes, were all safely landed on board the Dimock, which anchored and remained until about 1:40 o'clock in the afternoon, when the fog lifted and a course was set for Boston, arriving at the dock of India wharf about 8 o'clock last evening.

BAY STATE REPUBLICANS

It was decided to hold the state convention in Tremont Temple on Wednesday, Sept. 14. Hon. Charles H. Allen of Lowell will preside, and Hon. Elihu B. Hayes of Lynn will be chairman of the committee on resolutions. The committee at large is as follows: General John L. Otis of Northampton, William H. Bent of Taunton, Colonel W. S. B. Hopkins of Worcester and Hon. W. H. Whitman of Brookline.

No other business of public importance was transacted, and the committee adjourned subject to the call of the chairman.

Rocci Patris Dies at Boston and His Brother-in-Law is Badly Wanted.

BOSTON, July 27.—Sebastian Ceriste of Wellesley is now an alleged murderer. His brother-in-law, Rocci Patris, whom he shot at Wellesley, Monday morning, because the latter accused him of stealing $58 from him, died at the Massachusetts general hospital at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

He was in fair condition until yesterday noon, when the fatal turn came. The deceased was a railroad laborer, and had a wife and family in Italy. His brother-in-law is now a fugitive, and the police have not yet been able to catch him.

HAD EATEN BLUEFISH.

Guests at a Salisbury Beach Hotel Poisoned, Two Fatally.

HAVERHILL, Mass., July 23.—Mrs. David Webster and Mrs. William Sanborn of this city, died yesterday in great agony. They, with their husbands, went to Salisbury Beach on Wednesday. The parties dined at a hotel there, the ladies eating bluefish. They returned home in the evening, and shortly afterward Mrs. Webster and Mrs. Sanborn were taken ill, with the result stated. It is alleged that their deaths were caused by the fish they had eaten. Mrs. Webster was 73 years old and Mrs. Sanborn 43.

Warden Lovering Absolved.

BOSTON, July 27.—The prison commission have concluded their work on the report upon the recent escape of nine prisoners from Charlestown. They absolve the warden from blame, but regard some of the officers of the prison as neglectful of their duties and others as inefficient. The commissioners suggest that the rules be better enforced, and say there does not seem to be a need of new ones to prevent escapes.

SEPOYS ENTRANCED BY DANCERS.

Courteousness of Indian Troops While Amusing Themselves.

Probably the best way to see the men of a native regiment in the exercise of the courtesies of private life is to attend a nautch dance given in the lines. We will suppose that the Subedar Major has had the title of Sirdar Bahadur conferred on him by an appreciative government, and that in honor of the event he is giving an entertainment to the whole regiment.

An enormous tent has been pitched in the lines, and at nighttime it is brilliantly lit up with countless oil buttees. Inside it is packed with a dense crowd of sepoys, all sitting round in ranks and watching the dancing girls, who are gyrating to the sound of the beloved tomtom in the middle. At the further end of the tent sits the colonel of the regiment on a slightly raised chair, with the European officers on either side of him. Then come the native officers, also on chairs, while the Subedar major, as giver of the feast, hovers around and sees his guests attended to. Sepoys with fans stand behind the English officers and keep the warm air from them. Others bring the garlands with which the Subedar major decorates his friends, and the pan supari and the condiments with which they are regaled. Other sepoys again hand the sahibs the cheroots they love and pour out iced lemonade for them.

Of course the great mass of the men can take no part in these kindly offices, but they sit quietly in their deep ranks, no one hustling another. After the colonel has been there about half an hour he gets up to go, and shakes hands with his host and the other native officers, who all accompany him to the door of the tent, while the whole densely packed assembly rises and stands until he has gone outside.

After the colonel and the rest of the British officers have gone, which is generally about 11 p. m., the work of the evening commences in earnest. The sitting multitude swing themselves a little more forward so as to get a fuller view of the not very beautiful nor very young ladies who are dancing and singing with such vigor; the tomtom men whack their instruments with redoubled energy; pan supari is handed around to each sepoy, and every one prepares himself to make a night of it.

And if any curious observer should pass by that tent at break of day next morning he will still see the dancing girls—of whom of course there are relays—dancing away to the satisfaction of a sleepy but attentive audience, who have sat there the whole night admiring the performance. And they have sat there with the same imperturbable patience and good humor with which they watched the opening of the nautch. There has been nothing to drink but water provided by the bheestie, and nothing to eat but what each man chose to provide for himself. The soothing hookah had been passed around at intervals, and betel has been freely distributed. For the rest the singing and dancing of the nautch girls have furnished ample amusement for the whole night.

Now when it is remembered that the crowd in the tent is composed of rough fighting men, who have placed their lives at the disposal of the state for the trifling remuneration of seven rupees per month, it must be owned that their manners are uncommonly good and that they are possessed of that inborn politeness which is the truest good breeding.—Times of India.

Business Versatility.

The great versatility of the Maine storekeeper is well illustrated by the signs upon a store on the line of the Maine Central. After giving his name to the sunshine and storm, he adds that he deals in dry and fancy goods, boots and shoes, groceries, grain, feed, crockery and hardware; he keeps the postoffice, is justice of the peace, is a conveyancer, agent of an insurance company; he runs a set of hay scales; he has "ice cool soda and other cool drinks," has famous ten and five cent cigars, is agent for a very loud fertilizer and furnishes aristocratic eggs for putting under aristocratic hens.—Bangor Commercial.

Missouri's Name.

It is well to observe that no true "colonel" ever by any chance pronounces the last syllable of Missouri with the y or i sound. The only authorized pronunciation of the name of the state sounds the final syllable as a cross between a broad ah and a guttural uh, somewhat as though spelled Missourah. The process by which the change has been effected is that national slovenliness of utterance which manifests itself by calling one state Virginny and another Caroliner.—Kansas City Journal.

Something to Be Thankful For.

Two young ladies were talking the other day about a third, who had just become engaged to a widower who plays the cornet and has four children.

"What could be worse," exclaimed one, "than four children and a cornet?"

"Nothing," said the other, "excepting perhaps six children and a trombone."—Exchange.

Interested in a Tall Hat.

"A beegum hat once caused me considerable embarrassment," said Howard Johnson, an enthusiastic geologist. "In 1873 I was making some explorations in the mountains of North Carolina and eastern Tennessee. The natives were a very primitive lot and few of them had ever seen a locomotive or a town of 3,000 inhabitants. They spun and wove their own clothing and lived on corn bread, salt pork, 'yarbs' and sassafras tea. One evening I reached a village of perhaps two dozen houses and created as much excitement as a circus in the 'black belt.' Everybody turned out to stare at me and follow me about, and couriers were dispatched to the country folks to come in and view the curiosity. They were soon arriving afoot, on mules and steers, and one old fellow came in hot haste astride of a bull wearing a rope bridle. I was vexed and puzzled.

"I secured quarters for the night and went to my room, but the crowd hung about the house and talked in subdued whispers. Finally a committee, composed of two of the oldest citizens, was appointed to wait upon me. Their mission was to inquire if my head really ran up to the top of that tall hat. I removed the beegum and they inspected it and took a careful survey of my head. They looked disappointed and said they didn't see any use for more hat than head. After that I wore a regulation slouch until I got back to civilization. I did not care to afford any more circus pageants."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Good Rules for the Care of Teeth.

The following rules for the care of the teeth and gums are by an eminently successful New York dental surgeon: To begin with go to a dentist and have your mouth put in a healthy condition.

Cleanse teeth night and morning with a soft brush and tepid water. Brush lengthwise, from the gums toward cutting edges. Rinse the mouth after each meal; use quill pick if necessary; waxed floss silk is preferable. If compelled to take acids medicinally, use a glass tube or gargle with a weak solution of soda. Avoid cracking nuts, biting thread, drawing corks, etc., with the teeth.

If wearing a partial plate leave it out at night and cleanse after each meal. Avoid tooth soaps and fancy dentrifices; use nothing which your dentist does not recommend. For sore or loose gums, gargle two or three times a day with listerine, a teaspoonful to half a glass of water. Consult a dentist at least every six months; prevention is not only better than cure; it is less difficult, painful and expensive.

A Cabby's Trick.

There was a ball the other evening at one of the mansions in a west end square. Just before it wound up about a dozen cabs were drawn up at the front door. By accident the night was fine; and one of the drivers, who had spoken to the footman, came back to his fellows and told them that all the guests lived in the neighborhood, and that there was little chance of their being wanted. One of the drivers, however, was equal to the emergency. He borrowed a couple of umbrellas and asked the footman to get him a pail of water for his horse.

The water was brought, and just as the guests were coming out cabby poured the water over the pavement and on the tops of the two umbrellas. The ladies, believing it to be raining hard, called for cabs at any price and it was only after they got inside that the trick was found out.—London Tit-Bits.

The Saracens and the Moon.

The Saracens called the moon Cabar the Great, and the crescent still surmounts the Turkish mosques and is emblazoned on the green standard of the prophet. Schlegal mentions a story that Mohammed "wished to pass with his disciples as a person transfigured in a supernatural light, and that the credulity of his followers saw the moon, or the moon's light, descend upon him, pierce his garments and replenish him.

"That veneration for the moon which still forms a national or rather religious characteristic of the Mohammedans may perhaps have its foundation in the elder superstition or pagan idolatry of the Arabs."—London Standard.

A Royal Regalia.

The most expensive royal regalias in the world are those of the maharajah of Baroda, India. First comes a gorgeous collar containing 500 diamonds arranged in five rows, some as large as walnuts. Top and bottom rows of emerals of equal size relieve the lustre of the diamonds. A pendant is a single brilliant called the "Star of the Deccan." The maharajah's special carpet, ten by six feet, made of pearls, with a big diamond in the center and at each corner, cost $1,500,000.—New York Sun.

Mangling with a Vengeance.

"There," said the collar manufacturer, "stands the best friend we have in our business."

"What, that well groomed looking man over there? What did he do to entitle him to such a distinction?"

"He invented the present system of hotel laundering."—Men's Outfitter.

About Hosiery.

English hosiery is still considered the best in quality, and some of the finest cotton hosiery is still made in England, but the prices are higher than those of the same quality of German make. The French make the best shaped silk hose, but in cotton they are too heavy. It is about twenty years ago since the new English patents in machinery were introduced in Germany, and since that time they have made many further improvements, and today Germany excels in variety of colors and weave.

Some of the black hosiery has the yarn dyed, but that kind is not very popular in this country, as the finish is not as perfect as when the dye is given after the stocking is woven—it lacks gloss. Black silk hosiery was never more worn than at present, and some that is embroidered in colors is as beautiful as it is possible to imagine, and is sold much cheaper than formerly and on a par with the low prices that prevail in all silk fabrics.—Dry Goods Economist.

Oddities About Alphabets.

When the Portuguese first explored Brazil they made great fun of the natives of that country because they had in their alphabet no f, r or l; a people, the invaders declared, without fe, ley or rey—without faith, law or king. The Mohawks, again, have no labials, and vowed it was absurd when the missionaries tried to teach them to pronounce p and b; "for who," said they, "can speak with his mouth shut?"—Blackwood's Magazine.

NORTH ANDOVER.

An infant son of George Burns died on Monday last, of cholera infantum.

Edgar Tucker is to build an addition to his barn. George Closson has already put in the cellar for the same.

The electric light pole in front of Stevens Hall has been moved nearer to the building, by about twenty feet.

Charles B. Smith has purchased the steam yacht on Lake Cochichewick, formerly the property of John H. Sutton.

Mrs. Ellen Nutting gave an afternoon tea to a large number of her friends at the Centre, last Friday afternoon.

Mrs. R. V. Howard, of Farmington, Maine, has been visiting at the home of Dr. C. P. Morrill.

Horace F. Downing has purchased land on Middlesex Street, near the residence of E. S. Colby, on which he will build a house.

About twenty applications have been received by the School Committee for the position of principal of the Johnson High School.

Miss Mabel Morrill is visiting friends Fall River.

The date of the Essex County Fair at Lawrence, has been changed from Sept. 20 and 21, to Sept. 27 and 28.

George Thompson is employed as gatekeeper at the Marblehead Street crossing.

Miss Jennie Colby, a teacher, of Gorham, Maine, is visiting her brother, Mr. E. S. Colby.

The electric cars brought 4000 people to the Centre, last Sunday, many of whom bronght lunches and spent the day in the woods.

Rev. Mr. Batchelder of Lowell, occupied the pulpit of the Unitarian Church in exchange with the Rev. Mr. Noyes, on Sunday last.

The power being turned on too suddenly caused one of the electric cars to jump the track last Sunday morning, on the line, and an hour's delay was the result. No damage.

Thomas Murphy, employed for many years in the street department, will enter the Massachusetts General Hospital for treatment next Thursday.

Vegetation is suffering from the intense heat, and unless rains soon come the potato crop will be very light. Tomatoes are scarce, and among some of the farmers, the corn crop is a failure.

As there are only five pupils attending the Kimball School, and those who have been consulted are willing to attend other schools in town, the plan of closing that school is under consideration.

The road which is to be cut from Sutton Street to the depot will be some forty to fifty feet in width. The work of moving the post-office was commenced to-day. It is to be moved back several feet and nearer to the fence at the left.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin L. Goss have the sympathy of friends in the loss of their only child Benjamin, who died on Monday morning, of cholera infantum, aged 7 months. Services were held at the house on Wednesday, Rev. T. C. Martin officiating. Burial at Danvers.

The members of the Epworth League, with friends, hold their lawn party at the residence of Mr. E. S. Edmunds to-morrow evening. An entertainment will be provided and refreshments served. Sargent's barge will be in attendance at the church at 6.30 o'clock.

The applause given the members of the Mechanics' Brass Band by the 2000 people gathered on the common, at the Centre, on Tuesday evening, was ample proof of the appreciation of the concert. The electric cars were engaged until almost the conclusion of the concert in bringing people, insufficiency of cars and lack of power causing delay.

Pedestrians on some of our principal streets may well begin to wonder if they have no rights to be respected. With the electric cars on one side of the street, and carriages in the middle of the same, and a procession of bicyclists monopolizing the sidewalks, a person on foot in the evening finds locomotion far from pleasurable. It is generally hoped that it will be decided by the proper authorities that sidewalks are for foot travel and not for the owners of bicycles to appropriate.

A hearing was given by the County Commissioners at the North Andover railroad station, Thursday morning, to those residents of Sutton Street, who held claims for damages caused by the widening of the street. These claims were discussed and conclusions satisfactory to the claimants were reached with but one exception, that of Michael Hurley of Lynn, owner of Sagehomme & Byers mill, who was unable at the time to estimate his damage. Another hearing, therefore, will be advertised at some later date.

George Saunders and Ernest Smith leave town this week for a few weeks in Effingham, N.H.

James M. Craig is spending a few days with friends in Gloucester and Boston.

See Hinxman's "ad" in another column.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Bauingardner of St. Louis, Mo., are visiting at Mr. Fred L. Sargent's.

Misses Laura and Hannah Bailey are at Lakeport, N.H., for a few weeks.

Mr. Charles E. Meserve is conductor on the electric cars, Andover line.

Mr. Fred Murch is acting as overseer of the spinning mule department of the Davis & Furber machine works, in place of Mr. Goodrich.

Frank McQueston sailed Tuesday from Halifax, N. S., on a lumber vessel for Jamaica, W. I.

The Granges of Andover, Methuen, North Andover, and those in the lower part of New Hampshire held a union picnic at Canobie Lake, yesterday.

Mrs. George E. Hathorn sang at the Trinity Church, Lawrence, last Sunday, in place of Miss Helen Chamberlain, who is away for the summer.

Mr. Dinsmore of Manchester, N.H., is the guest of Mr. H. W. Field.

About 150 attended the picnic of the Congregational Sabbath School, at Canobie Lake, Wednesday. The attractions which the grove afforded were greatly enjoyed, and the day passed pleasantly.

The Eben Sutton fire engine was out for practice Wednesday evening.

The M. E. vestry has been thoroughly cleansed and kalsomined by Messrs. Henry Keniston and Benjamin Goss.

Civil Engineer R. A. Hale was engaged Saturday in surveying the Sutton land on Main Street.

The meeting of the fourth quarterly conference was held at the M. E. Church Sunday evening. Three names were added to the list of stewards, David H. Meserve, Mrs. John Pollard, Mrs. B. L. Goss.

Thomas Carroll was arrested at half-past twelve Sunday morning, by Chief Smith, for creating a disturbance. He was tried Monday at Andover before Judge Poor, and was fined $10 or 30 days.

Eleven electric cars conveyed the passengers to the Centre common, Tuesday evening, where the Mechanics' Band gave its first concert in that part of the town. These cars were crowded to their utmost capacity, and it was necessary for the passengers to walk up the hill near the High School, the power not being sufficient to carry all up the ascent.

Wynona Lodge, I. O. G. T., elected its officers Monday evening, as follows: Chief templar, Jonas Eastwood; vice-templar, Mrs. Grosbeck; secretary, A. V. Chalk; assistant secretary, George H. Moulton; financial secretary, Fred Carr; treasurer, Frank W. Frisbee; chaplain, Annie Sutcliffe; marshal, Wm. A. Frost; deputy marshal, not yet appointed; guard, Alexander Crockett; sentinal, Horace Barker; past chief templar, Charles Kelley.

Mr. Theodore Goodrich, employed as overseer by the Davis & Furber Machine Co., severed his connection with that establishment on Wednesday, the 75th anniversary of his birthday. Mr. Goodrich commenced work in 1834, when about 17 years of age, as an apprentice to Barnes, Gilbert & Richardson of the South Parish, as a part of Andover was then called. He came with them to this place in 1836, and with the exception of about three years has been employed here ever since, the actual time being about 55 years.

At the hour for the cessation from work Wednesday afternoon, Mr. S. Henry Furber, with a few words suitable to the occasion, presented Mr. Goodrich, in behalf of the employees under his supervision, with a sum of money in gold.

He Did Not Go Away.

A sturdy little German had stood in the line for an hour without making, it seemed, much progress toward the ticket office, which was the goal of his ambition. The place was uncomfortably warm and at last he stepped out of the line—having first bestowed searching glances on the men directly in front of and behind him, to fix their faces in his memory.

He was gone about twenty minutes, and returned looking much refreshed by his outing. He was evidently gratified to see what progress had been made during his absence, and with a beaming smile approached his old place in the line.

The guardian of the peace stopped him.

"Hold on!" he said. "You can't go in there. Go down to the foot of the line!"

"But dis is my blace," said the little German.

"Can't help it," returned the policeman. "You shouldn't have gone away. You've lost it."

"I say you haf not right! you haf not right!" cried the foreigner, in mingled indignation and perplexity. "When a man goes out and comes in again, does he vent avay?"—Youth's Companion.

LEONANIE.

Leonanie—angels named her
And they took the light
Of the laughing stars, and framed her
In a suit of white.
And they made her hair of gloomy
Midnight, and her eyes of glowing
Moonshine, and they brought her to me
In the silent night.

In a solemn night of summer
When my heart of gloom
Blossomed up to greet the comer
Like a rose in bloom;
All forebodings that distress me
I forgot as joy caressed me,
Lying joy that caught and pressed me
In the arms of doom.

Only spake the little lisper
In the angel's tongue,
Yet I listening heard her whisper,
"Songs are only sung
Here below, that they may grieve you—
Tales are told you to deceive you—
So must Leonanie leave you
While her love is young."

Then God smiled, and it was morning,
Matchless and supreme.
Heaven's glory seemed adorning
Earth with its esteem.
Every heart but mine seems gifted
With the voice of prayer, and lifted
Where my Leonanie drifted
From me like a dream.
—J. Whitcomb Riley.

They Live in Boats.

Travelers in the upper Congo say that the large tribe near the mouth of the Lomami river, who, in the days when Herbert Ward was paddling up and down the Congo, lived entirely in canoes on account of their fear of slave catchers, continue to live in boats and seem permanently to have abandoned the land as a residence. One of the agents of the Congo State writes that their flotilla is composed of several hundred very large boats. They always keep quite near one another, and usually cover the river for a distance of about two miles. The boats they now use are not the ordinary canoes, but are rather spacious barks, with sides skillfully hewn and carved, and made for the special purpose of serving as a home.

At the center of each bark is a little structure with a roof to serve as a shelter in time of rain.

The people rarely visit the land, but devote most of their time to fishing. They exchange large quantities of fish with the people on the shore for vegetables, but fish is after all the most important element in their diet. There is really no reason now why they should continue to live in boats, inasmuch as the neighboring stations of the Congo State are sufficient to protect them from outrages by slave catchers. They have learned, however, to love this new mode of life.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The Monometric Queen.

Our fellow citizens may be surprised to hear that Queen Victoria is a "monometric" woman. They will possibly wonder what this oddly named quality is. Professor Karl Vogt will enlighten them. In a memoir of his deceased colleague, Dr. August Wilhelm Hoffman, he divides the sex into "polymetric and monometric ladies." The queen of England, says he, is "eine monometrische dame." A woman of this species always selects one man whom she constitutes her measure or ideal of all other men of the same office, social class or profession. "For the queen of England," says the old republican philosopher, "there existed only one perfect husband, the prince consort; only one consummate flower of statesmanship, Lord Disraeli Beaconsfield, and only one ideally complete natural scientist, August Wilhelm Hoffman."—Pall Mall Gazette.

England's First Railroad.

The traveling on the first railroad in England was not very comfortable, undoubtedly; the coaches were at first only coupled with chains, as wagons are now, so that they jerked the unfortanate passengers nearly off their seats at starting and clashed violently against each other when the driver put on his brake. When fairly in motion, if the speed was any but the slowest, the very short wheel base produced a pitching action so trying that if the journey had not been a short one it would have seriously affected the popularity of the railway as a means of passenger transit.—Cornhill Magazine.
